

Explore Positive Representations of Islam in SciFi & Fantasy

Many of the world's great scientists, mathematicians, scholars, doctors, and poets are Muslim. And arguably, the world's first science fiction may have been Zakariya al-Qazwini's 13th-century Awaj bin Anfaq, in which an explorer visits the earth from a distant planet.

FREE EBOOKS

ANSIBLE:

The first 3 stories in a series about 25th-century Muslim interstellar explorers, by Stant Litore

Free until February 8, 2017:

www.amazon.com/gp/bookseries/B00QVNJGN2

The rest of the series includes Ansible: Season One and Ansible: Season Two.

A MOSQUE AMONG THE STARS

Anthology of 12 SF stories edited by Ahmed Khan and Muhammad Aurangzeb Ahmad

Free permanently at:

<http://www.islamscifi.com/a-mosque-among-the-stars-available-for-free/>

OTHER GOOD READS & RESOURCES

Iraq +100: Stories from Another Iraq (Hassan Blasim)

Alif the Unseen (G. Willow Wilson)

The Golem and the Jinni (Helen Wecker)

Binti (Nnedi Okorafor), inspired by a 10th-c. Muslim scientist

The Pauper Prince and the Eucalyptus Jinn (Usman Malik)

Throne of the Crescent Moon (Saladin Ahmed)

HWJN (Ibraheem Abbas & Yasser Bahjatt)

The Years of Rice and Salt (Kim Stanley Robinson)

Film/Art: In the Future (Larissa Sansour)

Comics: The 99 (Naif Al-Mutawa)

Check out this extensive library and resource on Islam in scifi: www.islamscifi.com

This flyer was prepared by Stant Litore, www.stantlitore.com, zombiebible@gmail.com.